

Innovation Week 2026 Manifest

The future is collective.

Collaborating to imagine and build sustainable and inclusive futures.

We like to think that the future will wait for us.

But that's not quite how it works. The future does not stop: it happens now, and we are the ones who make it happen.

The future is collective. It does not emerge from closed offices or spreadsheets. It emerges when actions, ideas, territories, and technologies come together. It happens when we recognize that we are part of something bigger and our actions have an impact on people, organizations, and nature.

If our actions shape the future, we have the responsibility — and the opportunity — to decide which futures we want to live in.

And that is exactly where innovation can help: as a tool to imagine, design, and bring to life the future we desire.

Innovation is not only about new technologies. It is not about waiting for the next shiny machine to solve everything. It is about making room for new ways of thinking, feeling, and acting. It is about creating solutions that leave no one behind. It is about building bridges between government and society. It is about understanding that, in times of artificial intelligence, being deeply human is transformative.

At Innovation Week 2023, we reconnected.

In 2024, we learned new ways to care.

In 2025, we faced the global emergency and reaffirmed: one planet, one chance.

In 2026, it is time to dream and build together sustainable, fair, and plural futures. Here, the collective is a reflective practice: we are all co-authors of tomorrow.

Innovation Week 2026 is our invitation: The future is collective. *Let's collaborate to imagine and build sustainable and inclusive futures.
